

PRONOUNS

VERSE 1

Lulu's backpack was open, and Lulu's homework was missing, so Lulu asked Lulu's brother whether Lulu's brother had seen Lulu's homework, but Lulu's brother said Lulu's brother had not

(Well that sounded weird!)

It sounds strange
When you say the same words over and over
There's gotta be another way
What if instead of saying "Lulu's brother" you could just say "he"?
Wouldn't that be easier to say?

CHORUS 1

That's why we use pronouns
They take the place of a noun
So you don't have to say it on repeat (on repeat)
If at first you said "Lulu"
All you have to say is "she"
And I already know who you mean

Pronouns
They keep sentences smooth
When the same noun shows up everywhere
You say the noun the first time
Then the pronoun takes over from there

VERSE 2

We could say "he" when we mean
Lulu's brother
We could say "she" when we mean Lulu too
"It" could mean Lulu's homework
And we can say "we" when we mean me and you

He, she, it, and we
Us, they, you, and me
Them, herself, him, I
Her, his, your, and my

These are called pronouns
They take the place of a noun
So you don't have to say it again
If you already mentioned Lulu and her brother
You could say something happened to "them"
Pronouns
They keep sentences smooth
When the same noun shows up everywhere
You say the noun the first time
Then the pronoun takes over from there

That's why we use pronouns
They take the place of a noun
So you don't have to say it again
If you mentioned Lulu's homework
From then on, it can mean the homework instead
Pronouns
They keep sentences smooth
When the same noun shows up everywhere
You say the noun the first time
Then the pronoun takes over from there
