

VERBS

Hey, we should try to write sentence, and
Let's make it about a bird
(We've got a noun!)
But if we want to have him do something
Then we're gonna need a verb
(What's a verb?)

A verb is a word for something you can do
Like "walk" or "run", "spin" or "chew"
Like "think" or "be"—a special one you'll see
Called a state of being verb
(Oh oh) An action word
(Oh oh) Is called a verb
(Oh oh) An action word
(Oh oh) Is called a verb

If it happened in the past
Then it's called a past tense verb
Today you answer
But yesterday you answered
If it will happen in the future
It's called the future tense
Yesterday you rested
Tomorrow you WILL rest

And if it happens again and again
Or if it's happening now
It's called the present tense
Every morning I jog
Or I'm jogging right now
Or he jogs, or she jogs, or they jog

A verb is a word for something you can do
Like "jump" or "dig", "win" or "lose"
Like "ski" or "be"—a special one you'll see
Called a state of being verb
(Oh oh) An action word
(Oh oh) Is called a verb
(Oh oh) An action word
(Oh oh) is called a verb

A verb is a word for something you can do
Like "read" or "write", "hop" or "snooze"
Like "see" or "be"—a special one indeed
Called a state of being verb
(Oh oh) An action word
(Oh oh) Is called a verb
(Oh oh) An action word
(Oh oh) is called a verb
